Routledge Series on the Belt and Road Initiative

About the series

The Routledge Series on the Belt and Road Initiative publishes peer-reviewed scholarly contributions in the wider context of International Relations, International Political Economy, Global Governance, Security, Geopolitics, and Geo-economy.

The series offers a venue for monographs and edited volumes making substantial contributions to the ongoing debate on the origin, processes and impacts of China’s BRI. Examining the related tools of diplomacy, trade, investment, finance and security and their impact on countries, regions, continents, global governance, security, international and multilateral institutions, the series draws together key thinking on the BRI as it continues to development and forge links around the world.

Editorial Board

Shaun Breslin, University of Warwick, UK
David S. G. Goodman, Xi’an Jiaotong-Liverpool University, China
Tjalling Halbertsma, Rijksuniversiteit Groningen, Netherlands
Alicia García Herrero, Naxtis, Hong Kong
Carolyn L. Hsu, Colgate University, USA
Linda Li, City University Hong Kong, Hong Kong
Janet Xuanli Liao, University of Dundee, UK
Colin Mackerras, Griffith University, Australia
Philippe Peycam, IIAS, The Netherlands
Penelope Prime, Georgia State University, USA
Laurids Sandager, Roskilde University, Denmark
Shigeto Sonoda, University of Tokyo, Japan
Robert Sutter, George Washington University, USA
Wang Yongzhong, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, China
Xu Xiujun, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, China
Yang Guang, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, China
Zhang Yuyan, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, China
Zheng Yongnian, NUS, Singapore

Mehdi P. Amineh
Editor-in-Chief
Department of Political Science, University of Amsterdam, and International Institute for Asian Studies, Leiden, The Netherlands

If you would like to submit a book proposal to the series, please contact the Editor in Chief, Mehdi P. Amineh (M.P.Amineh@uva.nl), or the Publisher for Asian Studies at Routledge, Stephanie Rogers (stephanie.rogers@tandf.co.uk).

Visit our website for more information and online ordering: www.routledge.com